

Visible by Paul Auster

Spools of lightning, spun outward in the split, winter night: thunder hauled by star—as if your ghost had passed, burning, into the needle's eye, and worked itself sheer through the silk of nothingness.

from the COLLECTED POEMS by Paul Auster. Copyright © 2004 Paul Auster. All rights reserved.